DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:

- I. Claims 1-14 and 30, drawn to a method/apparatus for locating cable splices and cable faults, classified in class 324, subclass 543.
- II. Claims 15-24, drawn to a receiver for analyzing inhomogeneities in the magnetic field, classified in class 324, subclass 555.
- III. Claims 25-29, drawn to a system for locating cable splices and cable faults, classified in class 324, subclass 538.

Inventions I and II are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because the combination (group I) does not require at least first and second antenna coils or a memory and softkey coupled to a processor as claimed in the subcombination (group II). The subcombination has separate utility such as being able to determine magnetic field inhomogeneities in a flux generator.

Inventions I and III are related as subcombinations disclosed as usable together in a single combination. The subcombinations are distinct if they do not overlap in scope and are not obvious variants, and if it is shown that at least one subcombination is separately usable. In the instant case, subcombination I has separate utility such as being able to display the degree of inhomogeneity along the cable route.

Subcombination II has separate utility such as specifically using antenna coils to detect a vertical and horizontal component of the magnetic field. See MPEP § 806.05(d).

Inventions III and II are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because the combination (group III) does not require at least a memory and softkey coupled to a processor and storing the test values in the memory as claimed in the subcombination (group II). The subcombination has separate utility such as being able to determine magnetic field inhomogeneities in a flux generator.

Because these inventions are independent or distinct for the reasons given above and the inventions require a different field of search (see MPEP § 808.02), restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

Because these inventions are independent or distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art because of their recognized divergent subject matter, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

Because the restriction is complex and is more easily understood and described in writing a telephone call was not made in an attempt to elect over the phone.

Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include (i) an election of a species or invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed (37 CFR 1.143) and (ii) identification of the claims encompassing the elected invention.

The election of an invention or species may be made with or without traverse. To reserve a right to petition, the election must be made with traverse. If the reply does not distinctly and specifically point out supposed errors in the restriction requirement, the election shall be treated as an election without traverse.

Should applicant traverse on the ground that the inventions or species are not patentably distinct, applicant should submit evidence or identify such evidence now of record showing the inventions or species to be obvious variants or clearly admit on the record that this is the case. In either instance, if the examiner finds one of the inventions unpatentable over the prior art, the evidence or admission may be used in a rejection under 35 U.S.C.103(a) of the other invention.
